AMONG THE DAISIES.

Lay her down among the daisies,
With the fringes of her eyes,
Softer than their silver potals,
Closed for blissful reveries,
Fold her little hands in whitiness
As in prager on her breast,
Fear not their fielded lightness
On the heart of angel brightness
Tired so early, hes at test

Tired so early |- when the dawning Tired so early—when the dawning using more a white-winged through the And the skies were half-awaking. Half in fading startit gloom, From the heaven of the startlight. Came the angels of the dawn; And the noming winds were sighing. And the curtains eastward drawn, and her sleeping face booked brighter.

And a whorever not said. "Goore."

And a whispering sob said- Gone All the daisies were unfolding All the daisies were unfolding.
In the fields, where never more
Shall the rapture of her child-life.
Kun in sheat and laughter over.
Tired to early!—the has rathered.
All her claoness in swift space,
She has sing her song and ended.
Child-like turning piecding face.
Back to home when loys are weary.
Toward the one familiar place.

Lay her low among the daisies: Angels knew her more than we; They have led her home from wandering. Tired with earthly revetry. And above her dissisting pillow

Let her simple tale be told;

Policy of the Democrats.

It is the present policy of the leaders djourn some time the last of June or r Carlisle says, so far as he is coneral days before the democratic national business mapped out for the session will have to be abandoned. This policy has been fully developed in the last week or France and Maryland and members of govery of a very large ledge of copper two in the House. It can safely be prelicted that nothing will be done with the Hewitt tariff bill and resolution. Chairman Morrison has already expressed himself very plainly on the subject of making any further attempts to pass tariff legislation, and he will very probably allow the matter to go entirely

Chair nan Randall is rushing appropriation bills through as rapidly as pos-sible, and hopes to have them ready and eported to the House in the next week r two. The legislative, executive, and udicial bill will be reported to-morrow. and the sundry civil bill in a few days. The general deficiency bill will follow oon, and these will constitute the bulk of the appropriation bills. If anything ilse is done it will have to be sandwichd between these measures. It is expass the bankruptcy ball, and the antientsuty till will also very probably be neglected the rest of the session.
